CAREER OBJECTIVE

I am an Archaeologist with more than 7 years of experience as a Project Manager and Research in cultural heritage and archaeological projects. I have worked with public and private sector companies preparing and collaborating with projects at local, national and international level permitting me well understanding and application of relevant laws and legislation in cultural heritage. The role of project manager presented along my career has given me the opportunity to build relations with relevant stakeholders. In this sense I am familiar with critically examines the changing meaning of cultural heritage within a social, cultural and historical context. In addition, I have experience working with multidisciplinary team in the design of professional cultural heritage management plans and ensuring its execution. I can assess information, assist people and work in a collaborative ambience to build solutions. I am widely familiar with describing, cataloguing, analysing, and dating various types of historic artefacts, including ceramics, metal, glass or standing structures. Also, I have valuable abilities in collecting and evaluating information; constructing, testing or defending an argument; and critically examining the available literature in their area of enquiry.

This extensive experience allowed me to develop my expertise in heritage management planning, covering the closely related processes of documenting heritage places, assessing their cultural heritage values and level of significance. Furthermore, I am able to write a clear and succinct statement of significance and drafting sensible and structured conservation and management recommendations. Finally, as a PhD candidate I have been actively involved in research, providing public lectures and master classes, as well as other activities such as laboratory work, fieldwork and the development of a number of publications.

Now I am looking for a position in which I can apply my research and management skills to put my knowledge and experience at the service of the society and contribute in the implications it holds for cultural identity.
